RIGHT: Pete Stark discusses national priorities with students from the 13th Congressional District during their trip to Washington.

Washington, D.C.
June 2006

Dear Friend:

Under the Republican Majority, Congress recently passed another round of tax cuts. At a cost of $70 billion, these cuts benefit the wealthiest Americans at the expense of working families. The tax bill gives people who make over $10 million a year a tax break of about $500,000 a year. But working families who make under $50,000 get a whopping $10.

The misguided Iraq War also comes at a tremendous cost. The war's most significant cost is certainly the thousands of unnecessary U.S. military and Iraqi civilian deaths. But, the seemingly unending conflict has also drained America of $261 billion - and counting.

These are not the right priorities for our nation. Tax cuts and war spending undermine our ability to fund vital domestic priorities. Instead, we should guarantee every child a quality education, provide health coverage for the 46 million people who are uninsured, and make sure working families have safe, affordable child care.

I am interested to hear your thoughts about our government's priorities. Please join me at one of my town meetings on Saturday, June 17th.

Sincerely,

Pete Stark
